What is a Practitioner?

Licensed Practitioners are “spiritual” counselors. A Religious Science practitioner is someone who is trained to use the technique of spiritual mind treatment, developed by founder Ernest Holmes, to help you help yourself.

A professional practitioner is someone who has been licensed by the Centers for Spiritual Living and who meets the established standards and requirements for training and certification. The training entails a four-year course of study.

The practitioners listed on the back of this brochure are available to assist you. The fee for meeting with a licensed practitioner is set by each practitioner for individual sessions. If you would like more information, please call the Center office or one of the Practitioners listed.

What is Spiritual Mind Treatment? (Affirmative Prayer)

We recognize that each individual must be guided by his or her own inner voice. We offer practical and definite methods with which each individual can create positive life changes. Among the benefits of the teachings of Religious Science is the understanding of positive prayer or spiritual mind healing. We refer to this as Spiritual Mind Treatment, a scientific approach to prayer, because it is based on an understanding of universal spiritual laws, especially the Law of Mind.

Through the activity of this Law, whatever a person deeply believes automatically tends to manifest in outward form, so when a practitioner sees God, or Perfection, where a problem appears to be, the Law of mind acts on that perception to bring about a change for the better, when the client is ready to accept this change.

What happens in a spiritual counseling session?

The practitioner will meet you in a quiet private place by appointment. Most sessions last approximately one hour at the beginning of your session, the practitioner will explain to you how he/she works and what he/her fees are for counseling. As trained professionals, practitioners usually charge for counseling sessions.

As the session begins it is always good to say whatever comes first to mind and to share your feelings honestly. The practitioner will ask you questions to help you uncover your inner truth.

The practitioner will not give you advice or tell you what to do. She/he will help you facilitate your own explorations to uncover Inner elements that promote your healing. The practitioner will also share Science of Mind principles with you and help you see how they are at work in your life. Practitioner sessions may be emotional. Tears are common, so if you become emotional there is no need for concern or embarrassment. Information Sheridan or practitioner session is held in strict confidence. When you have finished your discussion the practitioner may give you ideas for reading or activities to help you and your daily life. The Practitioner will then do a Spiritual Mind Treatment healing prayer for you. This will complete your session. At any time you can decide if you wish to schedule a future appointment
